For: outstanding artistic animation of individual hand-drawn images conveying an important story of value, even in a landfill

Text:
This team's message about the value of discarded items was personified by their main characters, who were portrayed in three different ways. We first saw the characters in an opening animation, where each frame was meticulously hand drawn and each sprite had unique and changing expressions. At the same time, the team gave a perfectly timed narration that seamlessly transitioned into our live-action view of the characters. Then they switched our view to the characters as the Daring Devices, which worked to escape their fate in the landfill, proving that even old items can retain exceptional value.

For: using six unique technical methods to create emotional support robots successfully able to navigate a MAZE of Hazards.

Text:
This middle level team created two Daring Devices, each with three unique Technical Methods, making for a total of six specialized ways to overcome the team's difficult Hazards. This aMAZE-ing Daring Device successfully, and independently navigated, a maze-style Hazard of moving walls by touch and color sensing. The device also used magnets and more touch sensors to search for a hidden key in a spinning Hazard. Finally, this Daring Device used a magnet-activated automated extending cantilever to easily cross a large Hole Hazard. The team's other Daring Device, which used no electricity, employed magnets to search for the hidden key, an automatic bridge, and finally its horizontal wheels to traverse the walls of the Hole Hazard.

For: their knockout Illusion and charming Presentation in which they showed that pigs really can fly!

Text:

Do pigs fly? With this team's illusion, they do! Their illusion was a knockout highlight in a charming performance. This team's Presentation was, in a word, charming. When pigs are invited to a barnyard's bacon festival, of course there are going to be problems! But the moment that really brought the Presentation home for the Appraisers was when the statement "when pigs fly" was followed by actually seeing it in person! The expertly performed and timed Illusion tricked even the Appraisers into thinking they were seeing a pig take off over the fence. By appearing to levitate with both feet far above the ground, we weren't sure how the pig was flying, but we knew it was. The Illusion also fit perfectly into the script at the peak of the battle between the barnyard creatures. Let's just settle on a veggie festival and let all the barnyard animals live in peace and harmony!

For: A multi-faceted technical device and humorous video game that together demonstrated solutions to school violence.

Text:

Complex technical design, real-life video games, a tendency to choke on twinkies – what do all of these elements have in common? They came together in this team's solution in a way that both managed to convey the seriousness of school shootings while also demonstrating possible solutions and integrating levity to the storytelling. This video game story was infused with humor through narration, characters, and non-player characters, with the characters stuck on a particular level where they keep dying and needing to reset -- be it from the school shooting or a twinkie mishap! This polished and funny presentation included extensive research and statistics about school shootings and plans for how to combat this serious issue. These plans included use of RFID tags on all weapons that would trigger school lockdowns and summon police based on proximity. A culminating moment in the Presentation featured a set with an Arduino device that was activated by an RFID tag and split to operate two different mechanical devices. These devices simultaneously and smoothly closed the school door in one set piece and set a police car in motion to respond to the situation on a pulley in another set piece. The technical design of this emergency response was complex and elegant, and paired with the video game presentation created a well-designed package.

For: A twisted turn on a Lewis Carroll classic story and a saline switch on a metal circuit.

Text:
We thought we knew Lewis Carroll's fictional world, until this team's Presentation started. Absurdity took on dark undertones as the callous change of pacemakers into spacemakers, the secrecy around the pursuit of power, and the fact that all this was presented so well filled us with dread. That one line "off with your heads" made our real world a warm and cheery place by comparison. This team not only won over the hearts of the Appraisers, but also the minds. This team's multifunctional backdrop sent Malice tumbling from the second-story of their set and then split apart like a broken heart to reveal an unlit map of Wonderland. Oftentimes on teams' props, electrical wires web the back of a set spinning motors and turning on lights. An AED has nothing on the shock Appraisers felt when they went to the back of this team's set and an empty tube connected a dozen LED lights. Instead of a metal wire, the circuit was completed with salt water running through the empty tube as a conductor. Thank you for reviving our hearts and minds with your innovative and heartwarming solution.

For: their depiction of a galloping nuggle with a magical golden swan.

Text:
This team started in the Launch Area, riding what looked like a cardboard horse. The Appraisers soon found out that it was actually a "nuggle." The team was able to gallop this creature into the Presentation Area with realistic-looking actuating legs that were triggered by a complex system of wires, gears, and pulleys. Through a magical transformation, the nuggle was able to re-feather and animate a complex 3D golden swan that was created entirely out of cardboard.

For: building a fully working elevator using a pulley system that literally took their Presentation to another level.

Text:
In a move the Appraisers couldn't ant-ticipate, this team built an elegant and fully working elevator lift hidden inside their forest scenery. With an impeccable design that utilized the mechanical advantages of a double pulley system, they were able to easily lift a team member several feet off the ground. The team had prophesized that the ant would ascend, but we never expected to see it happen quite so literally.

Text:
This team's hilarious and creative Presentation brought the Appraisers to tears. You might say there's no such thing as humor, but as for the Appraisers, we believe! Their red and white blood cell costumes used materials creatively and their Visual Effect was a serious adrenaline rush. The team did not "duck" from making fun of the Appraisers and we enjoyed being the target of their comedy. Grandma may have gotten run over by a reindeer, but in the end the reindeer got run down by Grandpa.

Text:

Many teams embody the tenets of Destination Imagination, creativity, kindness, and innovation, but few teams take an active role in promoting these skills and paying their DI experience forward. This team brought Destination Imagination to a potential new Affiliate as part of their Project. By partnering with Rwanda Children Christian School in Ntarama, Rwanda, this team helped implement a creative problem-solving program in the school through introducing Instant Challenges to the students. Their ongoing collaboration with the school set the groundwork for Destination Imagination's first teams from Rwanda. This summer, members of the team will be traveling to Rwanda to host a science, technology, engineering, art, and math camp for students and continue to learn about Rwandan culture, language, and dance. As if their educational programming was not enough, the team also raised over $11,000 for this cause through Amazon smile, partnering with a local car dealership, and collecting donations from local businesses and community members.

Text:

This team kept a brisk pace with their Presentation, but executed OWL elements of the Challenge with clarity and precision. To top it off, they were a HOOT. They used every D.C. second of their time to their advantage. While air, water, and mechanical energy powered a device on one side of the stage, a colorless tree slowly transformed in the middle, and two elderly people regained their senses on the other side of the stage. Owls from outer space traveled from past to present and side to side, singing songs and solving problems, giving the elders their eyesight, hearing, and mobility back. The kindness from their deeds transformed the kindness tree and the alien owl helpers. As they did more good deeds, the owlettes changed from white to multicolored.
