For: Who knew a comb could make crickets come alive? Integration was key, and this team was a locksmith!

Text:
This team had the Appraisers wondering where all the crickets were hiding during their Presentation. The creative use of materials had the Appraisers feeling like they were sitting in a pond and watching water bugs, praying mantises and crickets in their natural habitat. The cricket costume not only visually transformed the team member, but by placing hidden hair combs in each wing to make noise, the cricket came alive. The Presentation was incredibly integrated with the Structure and musical elements.

Great job!

For: The team's significant impact created harmonious relationships among neighbors in multiple provinces.

Text:
The team improved the quality of relationships among members of their community by creating a message that became analog-viral. A Chinese character was given new meaning in this process, which helped to spread their message of sensitivity, inclusiveness, harmony, selflessness, and caring. Through the team's community event they expanded beyond their own community into a much larger region, eventually touching the lives of more than 3,000 people with their message.

Text:
This team took us on an emotional journey by showing the joys and sorrows of growing old through the life of a tree. The story, told under the watchful eye of the tree, followed the other characters through joy, loss, winning and fear. The tree inspired the characters with messages of hope and empowerment. The tree was constructed with precision from surprising materials and left the appraisal team mesmerized.

Text:
Chug-a Chug-a Cho-Choo! This team's Presentation rode into the station full of creativity as the team presented about the ways music can benefit Alzheimer's patients. Train set pieces transformed to reveal pictures and words about the team's work. Plastic heads lit up in different colors to show how Alzheimer's patients' brains and emotions are affected by music from different time periods. From singing and dancing to lights and a transforming train, there were surprises around every corner. Each unique detail of the team's Presentation gave a sense of what the team had learned and did about music for Alzheimer's patients.

For: Outstanding engineering of a 3D meme kept the water flowing for cancer patients.

Text:

Picture water flowing to water bottles for cancer patients. Now picture that happening in a 3-dimensional meme! This team's Project involved providing water to cancer patients at the hospital to support the patients' emotional and physical needs. The team designed a meme that showed this process with actual flowing water. This team's meme went above and beyond with its unique integration of technical effects.

For: The team's "poetic" use of a software program helped to create an impactful meme to encourage literacy.

Text:

The integration of information about the Nebraskan poet William Kleofkorn into the team's meme was unique and intriguing. The team's meme effectively utilized the face of William Kleofkorn to present information about the community event, which encouraged literacy among local students. The outline of the poet's face and his bottle-brush mustache were formed entirely by words about the team's Project and the titles of his poetry. This imaginative meme truly inspired the Appraisal Team.

When Mona Lisa's eyebrows went missing, DaVinci's chisel, paintbrush, and charcoal stood up to help solve the crime. Was it the Vitruvian Man with 4 arms and 4 legs? The stained glass from the Sistene Chapel? The statue David? Through a stunning a capella song and amazing performance quality, the clues were revealed, but all decided that Mona Lisa looks better without the eyebrows anyway. We love when art appreciates art, especially when it makes us laugh our legs off!

For: A Tree grows in Knoxville - Appraiser Team wowed by live tree growth by pneumatic design to more than double its height.

Text:

A tree grows in Knoxville! The appraisal team would like to nominate Shanghai Primary School Elementary team for a Renaissance Award for the superior engineering and design of a team choice element presented as part of their solution. The appraisal team was surprised to witness the live growth of a tree to more than double its original height. The tree was designed using cardboard like cylinders attached to a variously sized PVC pipes. The tree was pneumatically lifted by a team member who bounced on a vintage bellows until the tree was lifted to its maximum potential height. Each cylinder was sized to allow the next level of the tree to easily lift above the previous level as it locked in each level for stability. The team designed a locking system by using a half round section of PVC pipe that was attached to each of the three sections and locked the position as it was lifted above the height of the half round section of PVC. In addition, the team designed a system at the top of the tree that allowed for a free flowing ring around the PVC pipe that had a string attached to the ring with a battery operated bird to fly around the tree. As if that wasn't impressive enough, the team strung several sets of battery operated multi colored lights to give it a warm and decorative feel to the element to reflect its full potential. It was a wow moment for all who witnessed this team choice element come to life.

Text:
Connecting across three states that are spread up and down the East Coast of the United States, this team went above and beyond in their outreach to provide canned goods to local charities. The food donations generated by their Project reached 10,000 people throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Florida. This impact was in part due to their skills at couponing, which saved them about $9,000 as they gathered food donations for the local charities. This team's impact has been noticed by others, as the team members and the team have been given multiple philanthropy awards during their work. This team's work has had a widespread impact on those who need help getting food. It is above and beyond what would be expected.

Text:
This team took a risk and made one of its Structure's three main supports into a hand-carved flute. It was not an added on piece, but an integral part of the Structure. It sounded beautiful, and was played beautifully as well. Their Structure was also able to hold a significant amount of weight, while still mashing music and Structure building together.

The Appraisal Team felt the team fully understood the true concept of musical integration with the Structure.

Text:
This team's unique and innovative solution impressed the Appraisers with a vehicle that utilized handmade, axel-less casters made from bowling balls and a custom-made clutch. This team also designed a catapult that fired an anchor from the vehicle, sending it flying across the site to accurately reach a mounting point. Once secured, they then used their team-designed clutch to engage the vehicle's winch, allowing it to reel itself across the floor on the bowling-ball casters.

Using their firsthand knowledge of cultural diversity, this team's perfectly synchronized performance beautifully explored the ever-evolving challenges of diversity and equality in the United States. Their story of many vibrant and diverse cultures tied together visually and thematically with a tale about a Rubik's Cube and its revolving sets of colors. This team eloquently reminded us that just as a Rubik's Cube won't work if the pieces aren't aligned, neither will society.

A complex switch system directed both power and wind through the inner workings of the vehicle, and the team could not have been more proud to share how they did the wiring and designed their air system. All who were lucky enough to witness what was displayed during the performance were delighted by their abilities and their pace of change.

But what appeared simple from a distance became an incredibly detailed use of recycled materials upon closer inspection. The team carefully cut plastic cups for texture on the roof, utilized cardboard and paper to create an intricate screen, and suspended one thousand tiny paper cranes on fishing line to create an invisible back wall. The cranes, made in Knoxville, were each crafted from an individual candy wrapper. The team must have eaten a lot of sugar! Text:

This team took an enormous risk by tackling acts of violence and controversial topics to portray a dark time in American history. Inspired by recent headlines and recent Supreme Court decisions, they transported the audience on a journey through pivotal events in the 1960's Civil Rights movement. When the team humorously began aboard their scale replica of a 1960's VW "hippie" bus, no one expected the deep, yet respectful retrospective that was to come. From the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. to George Wallace's speech on segregation, they brought the time period to life using a versatile, elevated prop piece that transformed from an innocent bookcase to a platform of hatred to a church pulpit which promoted equality. Completing the imagery was a mosaic made from 5,000 individually-placed beads, depicting Dr. King! It was apparent that this team completely immersed themselves in history. In the end, the team's risk-taking paid off; the audience was left speechless by this compelling performance.

For: The team took the audience on a flight of engineering fancy, designing custom hinges and showcasing lifelike flight.

Text: This team took the audience on a flight of engineering fancy in this modern take on an unforgettable classic. The Appraisers were wowed by this team's HIPSTER, a magnificent bird with individually articulated feathers that flew across the stage with the grace expected of a professional production. The Egyptian nightjar bird presented the illusion of effortless flight through simple construction, but with ingenious and meticulous engineering. The bird's head compressed and extended, its body shrunk and grew, and its feathers flapped. This small but intricate bird's animatronics were truly impressive. This team meticulously cut and applied each of the bird's countless feathers. The winged phenom used a compression system with wire, cardboard and fishing line, and while those items seem simple individually, the team's precise engineering amounted to an incredible impression on the audience.

But this team's engineering soared to loftier heights as well. This team's Camouflaged Object, an Egyptian-style obelisk, awed the Appraisers when the "stone" obelisk transformed into a wooden door. The team manufactured four wooden triangles that joined to create a rectangle, which was in turn attached by bolts to a frame. The team designed and created their own wood and metal hinge system to facilitate the transition. Again, this team applied simple and pragmatic construction to improve reliability, but the engineering behind this team's solution was simply sublime. The hinge was designed in such a way as to permit 360-degree rotation (in three directions) upon the activation of a single trigger. The rest of the transition was thanks to gravity. The team explicitly relied on the force of gravity to permit the rotating triangles to reflect downwards, creating a sudden and striking solution that was plainly successful.

The team also applied its engineering, design and construction skills in conveying dramatic elements of their Presentation. Not content to simply permit the gorgeous chandelier to employ glass marbles to create the desired refraction effect, this team relied on thermodynamic principles to crack the glass marbles while permitting the marbles to remain intact. The team also applied impressive engineering skills to the smallest details, such as showing the character Ramona's shadow crossing in front of a backlit window.

The creative use of materials could be found in the scenery, props and costumes. The appearance was that of true stage costumes, from the skirts, aprons and hats down the details of the ties and feathers. We were surprised to find that the costumes were actually created from recycled materials! The evidence of true preparation and dedication that was necessary to pull off such a fantastic performance was inspiring.
